Summit for Democracy Summary of Proceedings

President Biden convened world leaders in the first-ever Summit for Democracy, from December 9-10, 2021, calling the defense of democracy “the defining challenge of our time.”

President Biden also announced the establishment of the Presidential Initiative for Democratic Renewal, a set of policy and foreign assistance initiatives that build upon the U.S. Government’s ongoing work to bolster democracy and defend human rights globally. These efforts will center on five areas of work crucial to the functioning of transparent, accountable governance:

- 1) Supporting a free and independent media;
- 2) Fighting corruption;
- 3) Bolstering democratic reformers;
- 4) Advancing technology for democracy; and
- 5) Defending free and fair elections and political processes.

In his opening remarks, President Biden urged collective action from attendees in the face of “sustained and alarming challenges to democracy [and] universal human rights.” Calling democracy “an ongoing struggle to live up to our higher ideals,” President Biden recognized that to advance democracy, “we have to renew it with each generation,” because democracy is “the best way to unleash human potential and defend human dignity and solve big problems.” In closing, President Biden called on the more than 275 Summit participants not to “allow the backward slide of rights and democracy to continue unchecked” and instead urged them to work together “to once more lead the march of human progress and human freedom forward.”

We the People Must Respond to the January 6th Insurrection

By Vivian Lowery Derryck

January 6, 2021, was the 21st century's Day of Infamy for the U.S. Our country's first Day of Infamy, December 7, 1941, resulted in outrage as Americans united after the surprise attack on Pearl Harbor and mounted a mass mobilization for World War II.

A year after our 21st century Day of Infamy, as a country we're more divided than ever -- a flailing democracy with a polarized electorate -- and our fundamental institutions -- free and fair elections, impartial judiciary, independent legislature, free press, civilian control of the military -- are all under attack from within.

'Stop the Steal' is alive and well. A May 2021 Ipsos/Reuters Poll reported that fifty-six percent of Republicans believe the election was rigged or the result of illegal voting, and 53 percent think Donald Trump is the legitimate president of the United States. In November 2021, one in three Republicans thought that violence is justified to change regimes.

As we mark the one year anniversary, the lack of urgency in our efforts to aggressively address this unprecedented attack is unsettling.

If we do not have an accurate historical account of the insurrection, prosecute the key perpetrators and erect safeguards that reinforce a fair, accurate count as early as the mid-terms we risk a situation of massive voter skepticism and partisan election officials determining election outcomes.

The House Select Committee is leading efforts to address the insurrection, but the Committee faces major obstructions and is therefore slow to act. The Committee's timetable for public hearings and referral to the Justice Department to recommend charges for alleged perpetrators will delay major actions to midsummer, too late to galvanize public support for definitive actions to put the insurrection finally to rest. The Committee needs a constituency to urge faster action. We citizens need to seize the initiative and form a nationwide citizens' effort to rebuild our democracy.

Two-Phase Plan

Civil society -- including conservatives, moderates, progressives, civic associations, democracy groups, professional associations, churches, civil rights groups, entertainers and activists working on ranked choice voting, gerrymandering and filibuster reform -- needs to unite in a bi-partisan two-pronged plan that embraces all Americans, especially the rural poor, and appeals to their patriotism.

The first phase must be implemented with urgency before the mid-terms and the second phase must be operational well before the 2024 election.

In Phase I we need to build a vocal citizens constituency to support the work of the House Select Committee by publicizing its work and reporting every significant revelation through local news outlets and on social media.

Let the country know what the committee is doing. Work with mainstream media to profile police and others harmed on January 6th, building human connection and sympathy for those personally impacted. Have daily briefings as we had for the first phase of COVID-19. Plan civic protests for the sixth day of every month.

In a bi-partisan campaign as intensive as the 2020 get-out-the-vote drives and letter-writing campaigns, we must unite to push the Committee to hold public hearings immediately. The spring is too late.

Along with the House Committee acceleration campaign, the citizens' coalition must urge Attorney General Merrick Garland to expedite judicial review so that the public views the consequences for close Trump friend Steve Bannon and former chief of staff Mike Mulvaney. A.G. Garland should share his thinking: Is he drawing up charges for known perpetrators who clearly violated the Constitution? Is he planning to charge former President Trump with sedition? Can he find a way to respect Justice's tradition of relative silence on ongoing investigations but still explain his decisions to the American people in real time?

In Phase II, we will aim to bring Trump loyalists toward the political center. Our long-term goal is to have 20 million Americans now supporting the insurrection-whitewash to reexamine their views regarding January 6th. To effect permanent change in Trump supporters, we must work with local community groups and grassroots democracy networks to find common ground and reach a shared vision of our country. The coalition will have to demonstrate that we respect their views and their culture, and jointly work to craft a vision of a common future that gives each American dignity.

January 6, 2021 is an unrequited Day of Infamy for our country. That stigma can change with robust, sustained citizens' demand for their government to act with urgency and decisiveness. We the people can make it happen!
